Notes

Economic Environment

Good business means different things to different people. We know in North Carolina what we are talking about when we talk about good business because the way we run our State is a good example of what we mean.

No State or municipality in the entire country has a higher bond rating than North Carolina.

We maintain a balanced budget in North Carolina for two reasons. First, it's good business; Secondly, it's the law. In 1977, North Carolina citizens approved a constitutional amendment by more than a 4 to 1 margin requiring a balanced budget each year.

Our government in North Carolina is well known for its stability. The corporate income tax rate of six percent has not changed since 1933. The franchise tax rate has been changed only once in the past 40 years when it was decreased.

North Carolina's economy has kept pace with, and in some cases exceeded, national levels of business activity for the past several years.

The State is now on a path of growth and development which it experienced throughout the 1960's and early 1970's. Great strides have been made in employment, personal income and population growth during the past few years.

Personal income in North Carolina totaled nearly $29.6 billion in 1976 and ranked 14th in the entire nation and third in the southeastern states. This represented a 9.9 percent increase over the previous year.

During the first half of this decade, personal income increased 80 percent in North Carolina as compared with 70 percent for the nation as a whole.

North Carolina's largest growth sectors included insurance, real estate, transportation, communications, public utilities, government and services.

The State's unemployment averaged 6.2 percent in 1976 as compared with 7.7 percent nationally. In November of 1977, North Carolina's unemployment rate was down to 4.8 percent.

The fact that North Carolina has such a consistently high percentage of employment is an excellent indicator of the good environment for doing business which exists in this State.

North Carolina leads the nation in the manufacture of textiles, wood household furniture and tobacco and is also first in the production of textile machinery and clay brick.

Manufacturing accounts for 37 percent of the total State nonagricultural employment, compared with 24 percent for the nation as a whole.

With 800,000 manufacturing employees, North Carolina is the largest industrialized State in the southeast.

Legal Aspects of Doing Business in North Carolina

Taxes

North Carolina's tax structure is based upon the premise that everyone should pay his fair share but that no one should be burdened excessively.

The tax structure is designed to be fair and reasonable for both individuals and corporations. It is administered uniformly and equitably and the revenues are spent prudently.

Since the state assumes a major role in operating public schools and highway construction and maintenance, local property taxes are lower in North Carolina than in most other states.

The state pays about two-thirds of the operating expenses of public schools (exclusive of federal funds); local governments pay the remainder and finance school capital outlays.

The state builds and maintains all highways and roads outside of municipalities and aids the municipalities in street construction and maintenance. Counties have no road responsibilities.

Local property taxes account for only 25 percent of the state and local revenue in North Carolina as compared with 36 percent nationally.

In order to reduce the impact of the property tax on manufacturers' inventories, the General Assembly enacted a law allowing a tax credit against the State income tax for such taxes paid on inventories of raw materials and goods in process of manufacture which are "excessive." That is, which exceed the normal. The new law goes into effect on January 1, 1980. Property taxes on the inventories are paid to counties and municipalities in the usual manner, thus protecting the local governments from revenue loss.

Specifically, the tax credit applies to taxes paid on "qualifying" inventories where the book value of the inventories are in excess of 15 percent of the manufacturing costs of the manufacturer during the income year. The cost of manufacturing includes materials used or consumed, labor, depreciation and factory overhead. If a manufacturer owes insufficient income tax to use the entire credit in the year in which paid, he may carry the unused credit forward for five years.

Where a manufacturer has more than one plant in the State which is operating separately, the tax credit may be computed separately for each plant.

For further information about the working of the tax credit, contact the North Carolina Department of Revenue.

North Carolina places relatively greater reliance on state revenue sources — chiefly corporate and individual income taxes and the general sales tax — and less reliance on local revenue sources such as the property tax.

The state's corporate income tax rate is 6 percent. This rate has not been changed since 1933. The state's franchise tax rate has been changed only once in the past 40 years when it was reduced.

Corporations subject to taxes in at least one other state or foreign country may apportion their North Carolina income using a three-factor formula, including a "destination" sales factor.

Environmental Regulations

North Carolina has an abundance of natural resources. Among them are the highest mountains in eastern America, four national forests, two national wilderness areas, two national seashores and a progressive system of state parks and state forests.

Together with a prolific wildlife population, these natural resources contribute to many outstanding recreational opportunities in the Tar Heel State. In order to protect this invaluable resource, North Carolina is committed to the prudent use and management of its environment.

North Carolina's environmental regulations have been developed to achieve a compromise between the existing need for economic development and the necessity for preserving our natural resources.

The compatability between state and federal programs has resulted in the delegation to the state of authority to issue permits and to conduct many of the reviews required by the Clean Air Act.

Notes

International

Foreign markets play a major role in the North Carolina economy. Only twelve states export more than North Carolina. In 1976 North Carolina exported $373.9 million in leaf tobacco and $786.1 million in agricultural products, ranking tenth in total agricultural exports.

The total volume of export sales exceeds $1.5 billion annually and is increasing at the rate of $60 million per year.

Approximately 64 percent of the State's exports are manufactured goods and 34 percent are agricultural products.

Tobacco, tobacco products, machinery, chemicals, soybeans, feed grains, electrical equipment, food products and paper and allied products are the major exports.

Leading imports include lumber, aromatic blends of tobacco (for blending with domestic bright leaf and burley in cigarettes), wood, newsprint and a wide variety of machinery and consumer goods.

Many foreign firms have already recognized the great investment potential in our State.

In recent years 157 foreign firms have located 219 different facilities in North Carolina.

Industrial Training

North Carolina offers an industrial training program, considered by many to be the most outstanding of its type in the entire nation.

One out of every eight citizens of this State is enrolled in some type of vocational training. This is the highest participation rate of any state in the Southeast.

Vocational enrollment at the secondary level last year was 370,000 and an additional 317,000 students were enrolled in similar programs at the technical school and community college level.

There are 37 technical institutes and 20 community colleges, which also offer technical training throughout North Carolina.

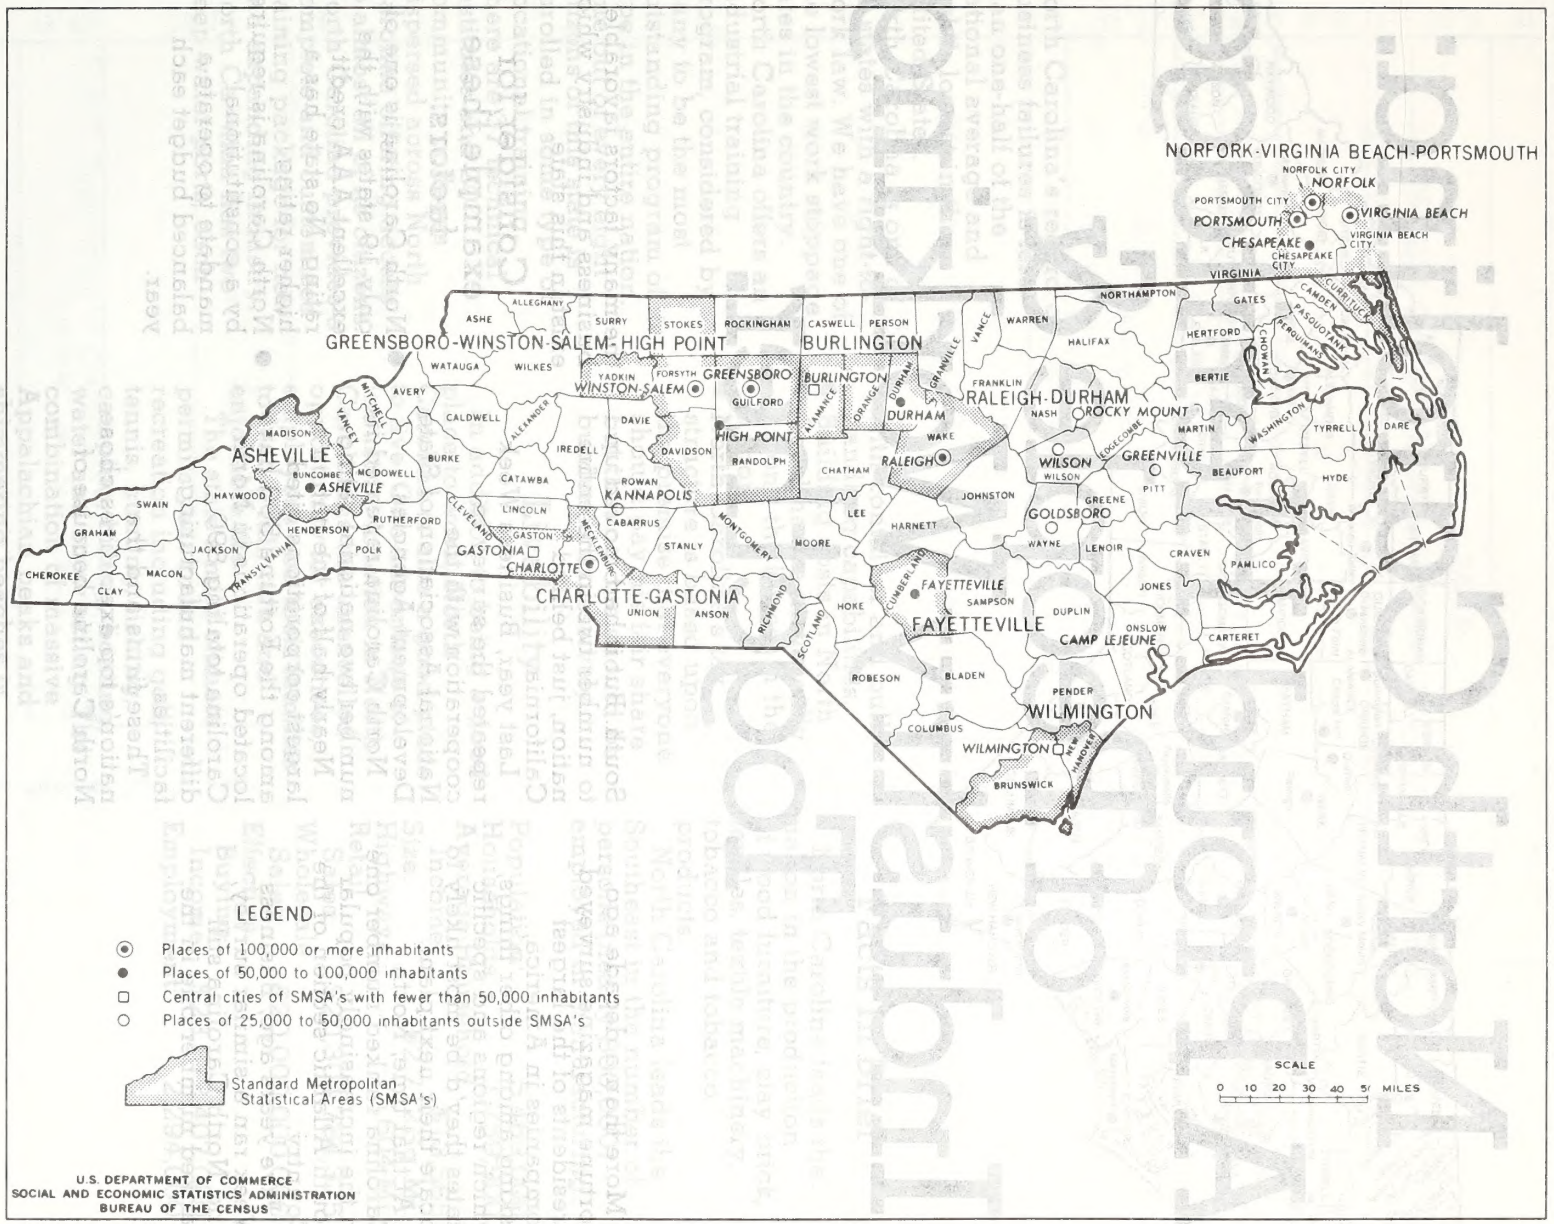
The State provides a complete and customized training package for new and expanding industry. Each program may be tailored to meet the particular needs of each company.

Under this program, training can be offered for virtually any production job. The State will provide instructors, training equipment and all classroom materials.

Since 1970, North Carolina has spent more than $5 million training some 50,000 workers for better jobs.

Higher Education

Higher education had an early start in North Carolina. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, chartered in 1789, is the nation's oldest state institution of higher education.



Louisburg College, chartered in 1787, is the nation's oldest private junior college.

North Carolina has not only the oldest but also some of the nation's best institutions of higher learning. It has two of the south's academically top rated universities in Duke University and the University of North Carolina system dispersed on 16 campuses across the State.

In addition, Wake Forest University, Davidson College and Meredith College are among the 29 private senior colleges and universities within the State.

Altogether there are 137 public and private institutions of higher learning with a total enrollment of more than 312,000 students in North Carolina.

COUNTIES, METROPOLITAN AREAS, AND SELECTED PLACES: NORTH CAROLINA

North Carolina: A Proud Heritage of People & Industry Working Together.

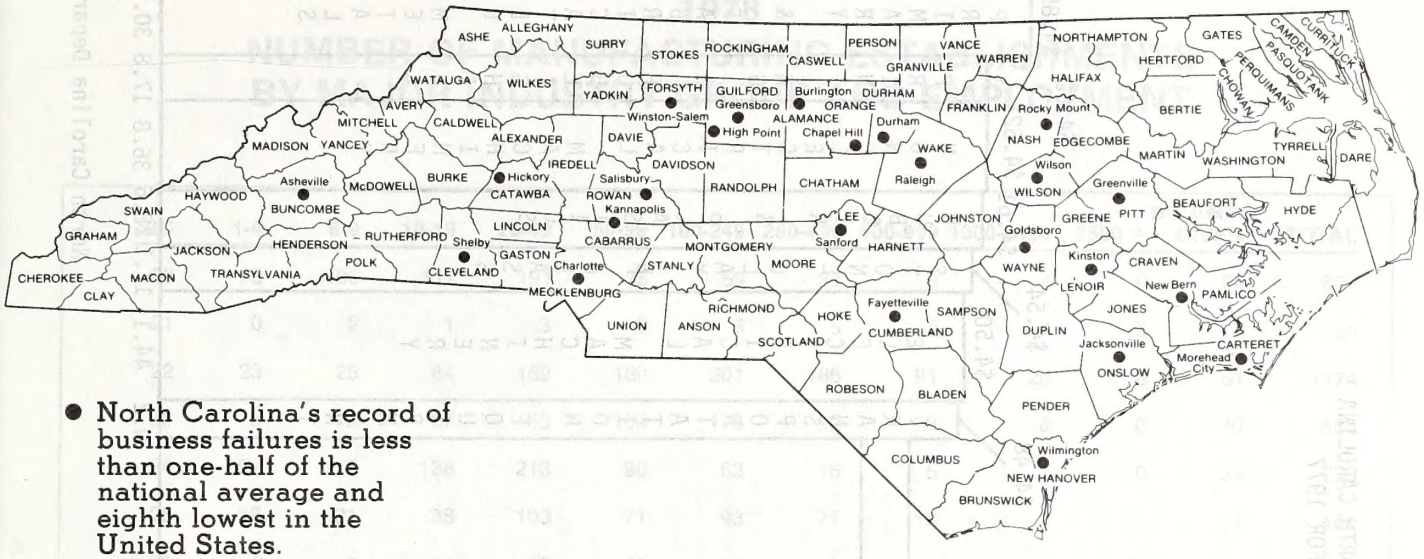
More than a decade ago, Fortune magazine surveyed presidents of the largest companies in America, asking among other things, which regions and specific states they'd be most likely to locate their next plant.

At that time, North Carolina ranked number one in the increasingly popular South Atlantic section of the Country.

Five years ago, Business Week ran a similar survey, and North Carolina still ranked number one in the South. But it had moved up to number two in the entire nation, just behind California.

Last year, Business Week repeated the survey in cooperation with the National Association of State Development Agencies.

North Carolina repeated its number two national rating.



Nearly half of the nation's largest corporations cited among the Fortune 500 have located operations in North Carolina totaling 890 different manufacturing facilities.

These firms and the nation's top executives chose North Carolina because of the many factors favorable to business and industry which exist in this state.

Consider, for example, these factors:

- North Carolina is one of only 19 states with the excellent AAA credit rating. No state has a higher rating.
- North Carolina is required by a constitutional mandate to operate a balanced budget each year.

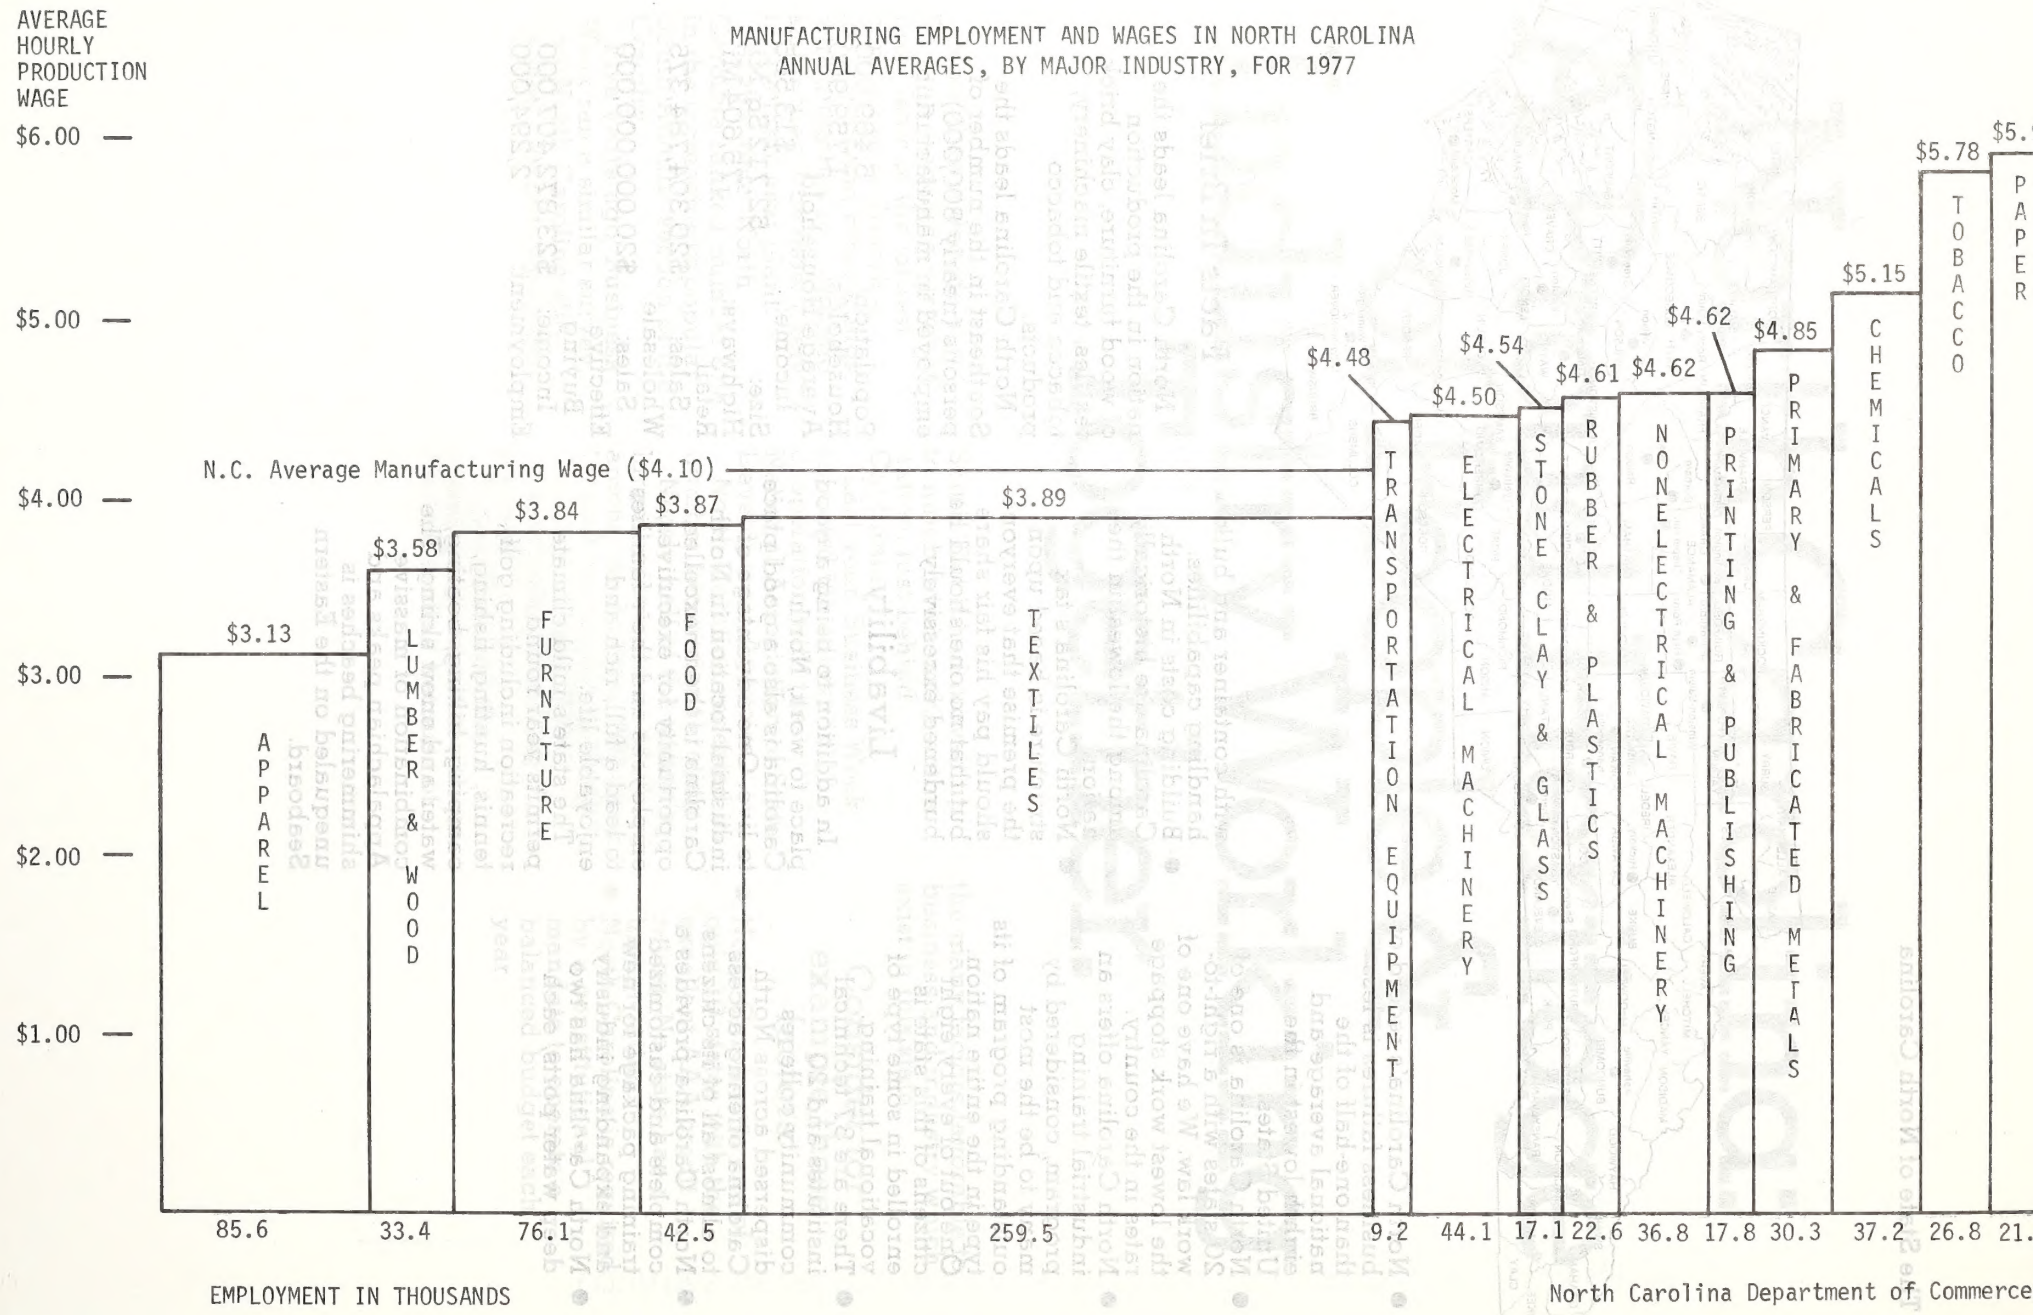
The State of North Carolina

- North Carolina's record of business failures is less than one-half of the national average and eighth lowest in the United States.
- North Carolina is one of 20 states with a right-to-work law. We have one of the lowest work stoppage rates in the country.
- North Carolina offers an industrial training program, considered by many to be the most outstanding program of its type in the entire nation. One out of every eight citizens of this state is enrolled in some type of vocational training.
- There are 37 technical institutes and 20 community colleges dispersed across North Carolina offering access to almost all of its citizens.
- North Carolina provides a complete and customized training package for new and expanding industry.
- North Carolina has two deep water ports, each with container and bulk handling capabilities.
- Building costs in North Carolina are historically among the lowest in the nation.
- North Carolina's tax structure is based upon the premise that everyone should pay his fair share but that no one should be burdened excessively.

Livability

In addition to being a good place to work, North Carolina is also a good place to live. One advantage of industrial location in North Carolina is the unexcelled opportunity for executives, employees and their families to lead a full, rich and enjoyable life.

The state's mild climate permits year round recreation including golf, tennis, hunting, fishing, camping, hiking, boating, water and snow skiing. The combination of massive Appalachian peaks and shimmering beaches is unequaled on the Eastern Seaboard.



Facts In Brief

Construction Costs

Construction costs in North Carolina are the lowest in the nation according to a survey conducted in November of 1976 by Chemical Week Magazine.

The survey was based on an index with building costs in New York City at 100. North Carolina's building costs were estimated at 64.6, lowest of all the 50 states.

An abundance of building materials, comparatively low property costs, productive labor and ample transportation facilities are factors which contribute to reasonable building costs in North Carolina.

The State is the nation's largest producer of clay brick.

A mild, year-around climate is also an important factor in low, stable building costs.

Industrial Financing

Industrial development financing is available in North Carolina through a combination of public and private sources.

Our financing programs are tailor-made to meet specific requirements of each firm.

In 1976, North Carolina citizens approved a constitutional amendment authorizing the establishment of an industrial revenue bond program.

Traditionally, North Carolina's industrial financing programs have originated at the community level with statewide and federal resources being called upon whenever necessary to provide industry with a competitive financing proposal.

Since the 1950's, local development corporations have offered qualified prospects a variety of "non-profit, sale-leaseback arrangements." These LDC's have combined conventional resources with a statewide Business Development Corporation and with federally subsidized programs to give firms a financing program with most attractive interest rates and terms.

North Carolina's conventional institutions have played an important role in industrial financing. The State's banks, home building and loan associations, insurance companies and investment bankers have led the south during recent years in providing a major source of capital.
